11'28" video instllation

People cook before they eat. cut into small pieces or make into a paste or boil or bake. If it is to make food edible and digestible, cooking is part of digestion. We use tools to make it easier to eat.

They range from cooking utensils to eating utensils.

I remember picking up my grandfather's bone with chopsticks when he died. It's called "Kotsuage". When we returned home to eat, we were talking about our grandfather and eating with chopsticks, and it seemed that the Kotsuage was still going on, and the urn was our body.

Stones colliding with each other in the sea waves and shaving little by little reminds me of the bird's digestion. Birds have no teeth. They grind the swallowed food with sand and pebbles in a digestive organ called a gizzard. Indigestible pebbles help digest food.

Then the sea began to seem like a large digestive organ.

Birds groom their beaks and feed their chicks. Even if they are not as soft as human hands, they can move very delicately. Chopsticks that entered the mouth turned into beaks and appeared in front of me.

Digest

2019-2020

6'23" video installation

I picked up a beautiful piece of debris that I happened to see at Yuriage Beach in Miyagi Prefecture when I was taken by partner. When you trace the surface, it looks like a piece of tile. The entrance, the bathroom and the kitchen are slippery, so I guess they are wet areas.

The glassy section remains sharp. imagine a fragment of memory. The earth is piled up, the breakwater is built, and the time around is moving, but This fragment is slow as if it were stopped.

It is a close and far piece of reality, and I found it stuck in the back of my throat.

I walk along the coast. It reminds me of the digestion of birds when stones collide and shave little by little in the waves. Birds have no teeth. It is a digestive organ called gizzard, and you grind what you swallow with sand or pebbles. Indigestible pebbles help digest food. Then the sea began to seem like a large digestive organ.

In this video, Tried to open up a personal experience of eating and digesting.

The moving objects in the video are the "important things" of the two.

My skin tanned badly when I was exposed to the strong sun at sea.

The skin just before peeling was similar to the silkworm I touched before.

I cover the body of a silkworm which changes greatly in a short time with my body which has recently started to notice small changes.

I wrote texts which is silkworm observations and my body observations.

This video was made to go back and forth with this text.

Before molting, the larva raises its head high and becomes immobile. It looks like they are praying with their front legs together.

The Adam's apple I saw at the time of “Kotsuage” had a similar pose.

Repeated thinking about the same thing is called rumination. It derives from the method of digestion and absorption of some herbivores such as cattle. This is the same in both Japanese and English. When there is an event that cannot be digested, keep a certain distance from it. Let time pass by. It's like marinate, and like cooking. It is a work created in the image of a weight when making Tsukemono(fermented food) and digestive organ. The stone placed on the grave may also be this weight.

Imagine a human egg.
Warm the egg out of the mouth.
The egg wrapped in the skin becomes increasingly patterned.
The patterned egg overlaps a bird-shaped human, and it returns to its mouth.

Rabbits have no vocal cords. Instead of using a voice, the rabbit stamped its feet to warn its group of danger.

When something unspeakable happens, I stomp on the ground in frustration. I want to jump when I'm happy, and sometimes I shake my legs as if I were adjusting myself.

When you are conscious of your body, you feel the vibrations of the heart pumping out blood. It is like shouting in a low voice after running hard or when nervous. You can make a rhythm by stamping your feet to your heartbeat. Confirming and transmitting, the sequence of rhythms is received beyond the individual.

A video of people knitting their pubic hair and tying it together and circling around.

My parents' job is to mosaic the genitals of pornographic videos. So, I've had a lot of pornography around me since I was a kid.

I wanted to make a video of sex, not to only excite our body.

The act of knitting pubic hair was inspired by the possibility of sexual intercourse. The appearance of knitting one's or another's pubic hair is similar to animal grooming.

I lived with parakeets for about 20 years from the age of 8.

The bird's body is not designed to show the genitals.

People wear clothes designed to hide their genitals.

My body knew masturbating from childhood before I knew it.

I remembered it when I saw my parakeet in Estrus.

So I wanted to create an image where the body of a bird overlaps the body of a person.
